Academic Support & Climate/Culture Update

The North Ridge Elementary School Improvement team worked on Monday, April 20th to review our progress toward our building goals. We continue to make progress toward our academic support and climate/culture goals through intentional systems, data use, and a strong focus on student expectations. At the same time, several barriers have been identified that are impacting consistency and overall effectiveness.

Evidence of Progress

Our team is utilizing formative data to guide instructional decisions and provide targeted academic support for students. Systems of support are in place, including structured intervention time and ongoing progress monitoring. Staff are working collaboratively to respond to student needs and adjust instruction accordingly.

In the area of climate and culture, the school has established clear behavioral expectations and is actively reinforcing them across settings. Communication systems are in place to support staff alignment, and there is a shared commitment to creating a positive, predictable environment for students. Efforts to reteach expectations and build consistency have been prioritized, particularly during transitions and less structured times.

Identified Barriers

Despite these strengths, several challenges remain. Behavior referrals—particularly from unstructured environments such as the playground—indicate a need for greater consistency in expectations and supervision. Variability in how expectations are taught and reinforced across settings has created gaps in student understanding and application.

Additionally, time constraints and competing demands impact the ability to fully implement intervention systems with fidelity. Staff capacity and the need for continued clarity around roles, systems, and expectations also present ongoing challenges. Ensuring consistent communication and shared understanding across all staff members remains an area for growth.

Next Steps

Moving forward, North Ridge Elementary will focus on strengthening consistency across all environments by refining systems for teaching and reinforcing expectations. Increased alignment among staff and targeted professional support will be prioritized to ensure clarity and collective ownership.

In academics, the team will continue to refine intervention practices to maximize impact within available time structures. Emphasis will be placed on using data more efficiently to adjust supports and ensure all students are making progress toward grade-level standards.
